INJURY

The British Journal of Accident Surgery

Editor: O N Tubbs FRCS FICS The General Hospital, Birmingham, UK.

If you are responsible for the surgical management of accident cases, you need a journal known to be an authority on accident surgery and trauma, a journal with an international reputation, a journal that will not only help you make the right diagnosis but will also tell you how to deal with it.

Injury, The British Journal of Accident Surgery, is that journal. It will help you to recognise and treat all aspects of trauma, from injuries of the head, chest and abdomen, to fractures and soft tissue injuries.

Regular features include:

- case reports
- abstracts
- book reviews
- letters

Injury will keep you up to date with basic research and work on accident prevention as well as common everyday problems from road traffic accidents, gunshot and stab wounds to industrial accidents.
